JOBS IN THE MOVIE EXHIBITION INDUSTRY

General Job Description

CONCESSION ATTENDANT

The concession attendant is responsible for selling soft drinks, popcorn, packaged candy, and other food items to theatre patrons. Because of the variety of storage and display needs of these diverse products, employees must be highly mobile as they move from one end of a counter to another to fill orders. The concession attendant must be able to move quickly as most of the concession sales occur 15-30 minutes before the start of a movie, and customers demand fast service so they can be seated by the time the movie begins. The average transaction time per customer, as measured by two of the nation’s largest circuits, should be no more than 35-40 seconds.

The concession attendant participates in pre-opening preparation and must be able to operate all equipment such as corn popping kettles, corn warming equipment, butter machines, and beverage dispensers. The stocking of supplies and cleaning the equipment is an important part of the concession attendant’s duties. When stocking shelves or display cases, the attendant must be able to bend and lift cases or bags of product ranging in weight from approximately 5 pounds to 50 pounds. The attendant must be able to reach and clean counters, display glass, and all popping equipment. The ability to empty corn bins, lift and clean popcorn kettles, warmers, and butter machines is a necessity.

The layout of a standard theatre concession area is narrow and confined. The average behind-the-counter work area is approximately 3’9”. Display cases, soft drink dispenser controls, and food products are located on different levels. To help put this in perspective, a front counter measure on average 2’5” deep at a height of 3’6”. The average back counter measures 2’3” deep, but varies in height according to the appliances it holds. Soft drink machines are placed in various locations within the concession counter. They increase the reach requirement by 9-1/2 to 14 inches. Corn popping equipment is often located in the concession counter but in some theatres the popping unit is installed in a separate room. This requires the transfer of large, bulky bags of popped corn to the concession counter.

The job requires the ability to reach at various levels, fill customer order requests, total the sale, accept payment, and make change. The attendant must have the ability to learn to operate a cash register. Because customers arrive and place orders during a short 15-30 minute span, the attendant must be able to speak clearly, hear adequately, and have the manual dexterity to handle a variety of sizes of food products without spilling the contents. Mathematical ability is necessary to make change and complete necessary inventory control forms.

Concession attendants’ duties may include those required by the theatre manager and the Company’s Policy Manuals.

General Job Description

DOORPERSON / USHERS

Doorperson/ushers serve as the “Ticket Takers” in the theatre. They are usually stationed in a central location of the lobby. They tear the customer’s ticket in half and return one-half of the ticket to the patron. They must have the ability to assist the theatre manager in large crowd control. They monitor the theatre lobby and common hallways to watch for unruly behavior and follow theatre policies in attempting to keep underage children from entering auditoriums to see films that are restricted to adult audiences. The job requires standing for long periods while interacting with customers. They must have the ability to maneuver up and down aisles, open auditorium doors, and assist patrons with their needs. They have the responsibility to quiet disturbances in the theatre and help direct patrons.

Doorperson/ushers are required to assist in the maintenance of the theatre during operating hours. This requires that they bend, reach, and lift various items such as crowd control ropes, rope posts or stanchions, advertising standees, marquee letters, mops and mop buckets, broken seats, and ladders. They need to be able to climb ladders to change light bulbs, film titles over auditorium doors, and outside marquees. The marquees (or signs) on the outside of the theatre are often located on the theatre building and sometimes on poles located along streets or highways. They are often 10 to 15 feet in height so the doorperson must have the ability to change marquee letters using the theatre’s safety ladders and equipment. Ushers also assist in picking up pop cups and other garbage on theatre grounds.

The doorperson/usher must have the ability to access all areas of the theatre from the projection booth to the parking lot. They must have a clear voice for giving instructions, be able to hear adequately, and have the physical strength to help others in an emergency.

Doorperson/ushers also assist patrons in finding seats after auditorium lights have been dimmed. They assist patrons in finding lost articles, page people in emergencies, and clean lobby and restrooms periodically throughout their shift. The job requires the ability to quickly clean the theatre auditoriums between showings. It is also the responsibility of the doorperson/usher to direct patrons during emergency situations.

Doorperson/ushers are often called upon to perform the additional duties of a concession attendant when assistance is needed in the concession stand. It is important that they have good verbal skills, with the ability to operate concession equipment, operate cash registers, and count back change to the customer. The job often requires moving, unpacking, and storing large cases of concession supplies.

In many theatres, the doorperson/usher is required to assist the manager in projection booth operations. These duties are described in the projectionist job description.

Doorperson/ushers’ duties include any additional duties required by the theatre manager and the Company’s Policy Manuals.
JOBS IN THE MOVIE EXHIBITION INDUSTRY

General Job Description

BOX-OFFICE ATTENDANT/CASHIER

Motion picture theatre box-office attendants (also called cashiers) sell movie tickets to patrons, make change, answer questions about films, and are often responsible for tallying and reporting the number of tickets sold for each show. These workers assist the manager by counting cash and performing basic record-keeping. The cashier is responsible for the completion of a daily box-office report that summarizes the sales for the theatre. The box-office sales system is computerized requiring the ability to read a computer screen and enter data by using a keyboard or keypad.

Cashiers assist management in keeping underage children from getting in to see films that are restricted to adult audiences.

Cashiers are often confined to an enclosed ticket booth, often glassed-in, where they sit for long periods of time. They are responsible for updating the box-office marquees and booth directories that may require reaching above their heads or standing on a small step-ladder.

To perform the job, the cashier must be able to speak clearly, hear or lip read adequately, and have the manual dexterity to make change and operate ticket issuing equipment. An aptitude for mathematics is also important.

Cashiers must have the ability to think and work quickly under pressure as the majority of customers arrive within a 15-20 minute period before the movie begins.

In many smaller theatres, the cashier doubles as a doorperson or concession attendant. In those instances, the cashier must have the ability as described in the job description for those positions.

Cashier duties include any additional duties required by the theatre manager and the Company Policy Manuals.
JOBS IN THE MOVIE EXHIBITION INDUSTRY

General Job Description

PROJECTIONIST

The projectionist is responsible for the operation of the projection booth. Since multi-screen complexes are common in the industry, a projectionist may be expected to operate 8 to 20 projectors at one time. For each of these projectors, the projectionist is responsible for film preparation on the film platter, threading film through the projector, setting controls, focusing and framing film, and adjusting sound quality and volume.

The 35mm feature film arrives in shipping containers of 2, 3, or 4 twenty minute reels. Each of these film containers (cans) weighs approximately 45-50 pounds. If the film is not delivered directly to the theatre, the projectionist may be required to pick up film from bus depots or other locations. The film must be brought to the projection booth, which is located above the theatre auditoriums and accessed by stairs. In some theatres, the stair access is quite steep.

The projectionist then prepares the film on the film transport system, known as the platter, by splicing together each film reel. The platter consists of a film feed-out and take-up device 52” in diameter. The upper platter is approximately 53” or more above the floor, and the upper feed roller is 72” from the floor.

Once the film is “made-up”, it must be threaded through the projector head using both hands. Considerable dexterity is required to thread the film through the projector.

Projectionists are required to physically inspect pictures and sound on a routine basis each showing.

Since a single projectionist is required to operate several projectors simultaneously, the projectionist must be able to move rapidly from one point to another to accommodate performance schedules, repair film breaks, focus film, and adjust sound. The distance between projectors can be as much as 75 feet and in some theatres there is only enough space for one person between the platter system and the wall.

Projectionists must be able to maintain and change the projectors Xenon Bulb. This bulb is a delicate and expensive piece of equipment which provides light for film presentation. Replacement is made inside the projectors lamphouse located approximately 50” above the floor. The projectionist must wear safety equipment when replacing xenon bulbs.

Projectionists are also responsible for cleaning and maintenance of the booth, projector, and sound equipment. They clean lenses, oil projectors, and make small repairs and adjustments. The opening and closing of masking curtains and the adjustment of auditorium lighting is often the function of a projectionist before and after movies. This process may involve substantial movement up and down stairs. When a movie has completed its playtime at a theatre, projectionists “tear-down” or re-pack the film onto their original reels. They label the film cans for shipping and place the containers for pick-up by various film carriers.

Projectionists often work alone and stand for most of their work time. Their duties include much lifting, reaching, and carrying. A projectionist must have good eyesight, hearing, and color perception. They must have mechanical aptitude and good manual dexterity.

Because of today’s automated projection booths, the manager often functions as a manager/projectionist. The theatre manager is then responsible for the training and use of theatre personnel, such as doorpersons, to perform some of the daily operating tasks in the booth.

Projectionists’ duties include any additional duties required by the theatre manager and the Company Policy Manuals.
